The astronomers say Halley's comet will not interfere with our earthly affairs and we may continue to pursue the evil tenor of our way.

But it might be well for us to remember that some day the elements shall meet with fervent heat and the world shall be no more.

Comets have sometimes caused great terrors.

The appearance of Halley's comet in 1486, just as the Turks had become masters of Constantinople, and threatened to advance into Europe, filled the Western nations with dread, and to their prayers were added "Lord save us from the Turks, the devil and comet."

Some farce able to drive back appears to seize these and sweep them out into space with wonderful swiftness thus making the tail and producing the comet light, but it is also produced by the reflected light of the sun.

They generally move from East to West the tail always preceding from the sun.

About May the 18th, is the time fixed by the astronomers in which the earth will pass through the tail of one of the greatest comets ever known to the ages.

We are not a prophet nor a son of a prophet, but let us watch on May 18th and during three hours on that day we will see wonders, but don't be alarmed.

ADAMS—JEFFORDS

Elven Jeffords and Betty Adams of the county applied early Tuesday morning for license to marry, but the girl claiming to be but 19 years old, County Clerk Guess refused them license. After a consultation the couple again appealed to Mr. Guess, the girl stating age had made a mistake, but alas they were again refused. Finally in the evening they, by some means furnished proof sufficient for Mr. Guess to grant them license and 2 o'clock they were married by Rev. J. S. Henry at New Marion Hotel.

The Husband Explains

She threw the letter on the table and looked over at her husband.

"That's just like a woman," she said. "Anybody would suppose that I had been trying to do her a mean trick from the tone of her letter, and I thought I was doing her a favor."

He went right on reading the newspaper, devoting the rest of his attention to his coffee.

"Don't take enough interest in my affairs to read the letter, I suppose," she went on, getting dangerously near the teary stage. "Well, you needn't, then."

"You just tell me what's in it, dear," he said. "That will be sufficient."

She seemed mollified and picked up the rejected letter.

"I can tell you what's in it," she went on. "It's just in answer to what I wrote her about the flat. You know Jenny Smith told me that she would always like to take this flat off our hands if we were tired of it; that she had never seen a flat anywhere so good; that she would regard it as a great favor if we did let her know and that she wanted just such an apartment."

"I did that and now she writes back that she is very appreciative of my offer, but that under the circumstances she thinks she will not be able to take it off our hands, much as she would like to be of service to us. She writes as if I had implored her to rent it as a great favor to me."

"That's just the way with people when you ask them to do what they have said they are very anxious to do once they get the idea that they are doing you a favor. It's just the same thing that happened when I asked the Joneses if they wanted my cook."

"Every time they came to the house last winter they used to rave over Emily. They would be so happy if only they could get such a cook, they said. Yet when I wrote to them that we were giving up keeping house and that they could have her if they wanted her they seemed to be actually embarrassed about the matter, as if they were having a servant forced on them willy nilly."

He had not indicated any great interest at the beginning, but listened more attentively as his wife's narrative proceeded. Then he put down the paper and began to talk himself.

"Don't you remember the time you bought that old side table at auction and Mary asked you to let her have it if you ever wanted to sell it?"

She nodded.

"Don't you recall also how patronizing she was when you told her you thought you might let her have it because you didn't want to crowd your dining room? Surely you have not forgotten how she tried to wriggle out of taking it just as if you were determined to hold her to a bargain."

She admitted that she had not forgotten a detail of this transaction. Then she also admitted how provoked she had been when her cousin Helen had asked her to give her the refusal of her old horse Sally if she decided to sell her when they went to town in the autumn.

"Then how can you," he asked, "with these things fresh in your mind, put yourself in the way of being patronized again in such fashion? You ought to learn that what they do not possess often seems very attractive to persons so long as it remains the property of others. It is quite a different thing when it becomes attainable to them."

"It almost invariably happens that they have ceased to care for it and it is only human nature for them to give themselves the satisfaction of showing the owners that they are now in possession of the situation. So remember that trait the next time you offer to anybody a similar kindness."

A Monkey Trick.

Curator Raymond L. Ditmars, of the New York zoo, was praising the intelligence of monkeys.

"A Philadelphia man," he said, "was hurrying out Fowlerton avenue one afternoon when, all of a sudden, an organ grinder's little monkey dropped dead. The poor grinder's grief was pitiful. The Philadelphia man, touched gave him a half dollar and hastened away."

"An hour later, returning through Market street, he saw the same organ grinder, and just as he passed, the monkey again dropped dead, and the grinder's grief was even more pitiful than before."

"The Philadelphia man gave a loud laugh. The grinder, recognizing him, laughed, too, but made no motion to return the half dollar."

Two Sides to Great Actress.

Mrs. Siddons was, on and off the stage, "two different people." On the stage she was a pythoness, nightly hypnotized into passionate emotions by the sight of the drop curtain and the boards, says a writer. In her home she was, at all events to the casual observer, more than a thought too much a mere mother and British matron, loving to be seemingly and of good report, shut in the tower of an unimaginative nature. Had she not been an actress she would have made (such an observer might have said) an ideal bishop's wife.

Stop Women And Consider

This Fact—that in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with women's diseases covers twenty-five years.

The present Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, was for years under her direction, and has ever since her decease continued to advise women.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty causes them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probable examinations of even their family physician. Such questioning and examination is unnecessary. Without cost you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION:

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Mrs. Pinkham, care of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.
